of what it means to find connection
in a time of isolation
TOUCH
Mina Shum

I was on Day 12 of 14 of travel quarantine when I was asked to join ONE(NINE).

Touch became an offering and medicine at the same time.

Write what you need, they say.

For years, I’d been encouraging my filmmaker friends to make found films – what would you do with all that footage that’s lying in storage, I’d ask.

The question was clearly rhetorical, as Touch uses footage from the sets of past films, a One Take SUPER 8 film I made and a new scene shot for this - I wanted to be resourceful and useful and figure out a way to do that while growing in my fiction practice.

Gratitude for the fierce filmmakers of ONE(NINE) and for our time together.

And special thanks to Ingrid Veninger for inviting me.

Bio

MINA SHUM (CANADA) has written and directed five award-winning feature films that have successfully touched international and domestic audiences. Her films have premiered in Sundance, Toronto and Berlin. The New York Times calls her work “wry and winning.” In addition to her feature films, Shum’s work includes art installations, essays, lectures and short films. Feature film titles include Double Happiness, Drive, She Said, Long Life Happiness and Prosperity, Ninth Floor and Meditation Park. Shum has also directed episodic television in all lengths for a variety of networks including Netflix, CTV, CBC, Nickelodeon, Oxygen, W and MTV/Logo.
HEAL/RAGE
Isa Benn

It is my honour to be spoken to by the divine; to be blessed with their love is a gift I do not take lightly, nor take for granted. I am grateful for the high vibrational energies that guide and protect my storytelling. I am grateful for the humans that elevate my voice, despite the phobias that attempt to needle their way into even the most sacred of rituals and spiritual quests. It is my honour to share the experiences of the divine queer black woman, divine non-binary black person, and divine non-binary black woman within and outside of my immediate family. It is my honour to protect their sacred lives, their gracious existence. It is my honour to remind us all of their inherent power. It is my honour to protect our Indigenous rite to spiritual-storytelling and speaking through and on behalf of the most ancient Indigenous, Holy-language there is: Love.

– Thank you. Isa Ben-Moja

Bio

ISA BENN (CANADA) is an award-winning filmmaker, screenwriter, playwright, multimedia artist and creator. In light of several highly visual sensory “handicaps,” including synesthesia, Asperger’s and ideasthesia, “Isa is uniquely able to connect to and penetrate her audience’s emotional barriers and facilitate a collective cognitive experience that leaves audiences feeling connected, healed and with greater awareness of a world outside of themselves” (Caitlin Burns, HarperCollins). She draws upon her experience as a North and West African, Caribbean, Jewish, Queer, Latinx woman to create stylistically introspective works that shed a harsh light on the racism, lack of decolonization, colorism, ableism and attacks on queer bodies that are rampant in North American society.
I cannot recall another spring with similar blue skies like this year when COVID-19 hit us. In April and May it was amazingly bright in Berlin, all sunshine and light. So, walking around, it was difficult to see what exactly had changed. And how…?
It felt like the opening sequence of a horror movie, just before the evil forces attack. The lockdown allowed me glimpses into what was yet to come. How practically everything had already transformed its meaning in this absurd time gap. A weird standstill, full of forebodings, caused by high velocities in opposite directions.

Bio

DOROTHEE WENNER (GERMANY) is based in Berlin, where she works as a freelance filmmaker, writer and curator. Her work in the various fields focuses on aspects of transcultural relations, especially between European and African countries. As a curator, she has been working for the Berlin International Film Festival since 1990 as well as for many other international film festivals and organizations. In addition to a body of publications in newspapers and journals, her books Zorros blonde Schwester and Unser Ausland were published in Germany and beyond. Her filmography includes: Hollywood Killed Me (1988), Unser Ausland (2002), Star Biz (2005), Shanti Plus (2006), Peace Mission (2008), DramaConsult (2012), Family Affairs/Living Archive (2012/13/19), and the web series Kinshasa Collection, which was launched in 2017 and developed into the transmedia project KIZOBAZOBA in 2018/19. Currently, Dorothee is in development on the web series Teff Club which is an Ethiopia and Germany co-production.
“... Do you know that there are some who refuse to die? Have you ever heard a woman scream ‘Never!’ with her last gasp? Well, I have. And then I saw that I could never get hardened to it. ... I've never managed to get used to seeing people die. That’s all I know. Yet after all –”

Rieux fell silent and sit down. He felt his mouth dry.

“After all –?” Tarrou prompted softly.

“After all,” the doctor repeated, then hesitated again, fixing his eyes on Tarrou, “it’s something that a man of your sort can understand most likely, but since the order of the world is shaped by death, mightn’t it be better for God if we refuse to believe in Him and struggle with all our might against death, without raising our eyes toward the heaven where He sits in silence?”

Tarrou nodded.

“Yes. But your victories will never be lasting; that’s all.”

Rieux's face darkened.

“Yes, I know that. But it’s no reason for giving up the struggle.”

“No reason, I agree. Only, I now can picture what this plague must mean for you.”

“Yes. A never ending defeat.”

Tarrou … suddenly said:
“Who taught you all this, Doctor?”

The reply came promptly.

BIRTH

INGRID VENINGER

Hallie, my 28-year old daughter, said, “I had imagined something different for Laska’s 1st birthday… I thought we would be all together and have a big party.” It was not going to happen the way she imagined.

Fall 2020 was when I planned to shoot my 8th feature film, starting in the U.K., and featuring four generations of women. It was not going to happen the way I imagined, either.

I asked Hallie to be part of my ONE(NINE) chapter and when she said, “yes” — this project was born. We came together to shoot for 4-days. I had a Sony Handycam and a GoPro. My partner, John, recorded the sound.

During the days of production, I roamed around my daughter, and her daughter, with my camera, in a style shaped and informed by many vérité filmmakers. Most of my films, including this one, have been a combination of fiction and non-fiction — a hybrid. Ultimately, the hope is that it feels authentic and true; that is the magic of it.

Editing was done remotely via Zoom. Colour grading, sound design and the final mix were also completely remote. Thank you Rick Bartram, Bill Ferwerda, Michelle Irving, Eric Apps and Deluxe Post Production. Also, thank you to little Laska for her patience and presence (I wonder what she’s going to think of this film), and to my daughter, Hallie, for her trust.

Bio

INGRID VENINGER (CANADA) holds an MFA from York University and has been a tenure-track faculty member of AMPD (School of the Arts, Media, Performance and Design) since 2019.

Born in Bratislava and raised in Canada, Ingrid formed pUNK Films Inc. with a “nothing is impossible” manifesto. Since 2008, she has produced eleven feature films with premieres at TIFF, Rotterdam, Locarno, Slamdance, Whistler, Rome, Hot Docs, Karlovy Vary and MoMA in New York. With retrospectives of her work in Ottawa at the Canadian Film Institute and in Santiago, Chile at FEMCine, Ingrid received the WIFTS International Visionary Award, the Alliance of Women Film Journalists EDA Award for “Best Director” and the Jay Scott Prize awarded by the Toronto Film Critics Association. A member of the Directors Guild of Canada and participant in the inaugural TIFF Studio, Berlinale Talents, and Rotterdam Producer’s Lab, Ingrid has been a mentor at the Canadian Film Centre and Screenwriter-in-Residence at the University of Toronto.

An advocate for gender parity, Ingrid initiated the pUNK Films Femmes Lab in 2014 to foster narrative feature films written and directed by Canadian women, sponsored by Academy Award winner Melissa Leo. In July 2020, Ingrid took the Producer’s Pledge to “acknowledge & dismantle systemic racism in Canadian film & television.” pUNK FILMS www.punkfilms.ca

SPIRIT
JENNIFER PODEMSKI

When Ingrid called to ask if I would participate in this project I was not in a good place. The whole pandemic thing was taking its toll and I was feeling anxious and uninspired. I didn’t realize it at the time but this project became a life raft and it reignited my creativity. I will forever be grateful to Ingrid and her outrageous faith in the power of creation.

I said yes without thinking about it and when I got off the phone I literally asked myself what the hell I was thinking. Then, over the next several weeks I became so overwhelmed by life in isolation, with two kids under ten, and the anxiety around shutting down a drama series (Unsettled), in the middle of shooting, which I was producing, writing and directing.

I really struggled with what I wanted to say with this film. I talked about it with my husband and kids and nothing I came up with was feasible. All of the ideas were too big, too complicated, and generally over the top. It got me thinking about why I tell stories. I thought about this for a long time. I went inward. I spent time there. I reflected and meditated. It took about 5 weeks before I realized that I was overcomplicating things and I understood that I was being called to simplify, to take in my surroundings, and use what was available to me.

That’s when I sat down with my son. He is 8 and he is the only other professional actor in the house. I asked him to tell me about his isolation experience. I started talking to him as a writing partner and not as my child. I was floored by what he told me and how articulately he expressed himself. He encouraged me to bring those elements into a new story. I told him that I wanted him to help me write it. He took the invitation very seriously.

I am in awe of how this project forced me to shift my perspective. That it brought my son and I closer than ever and became the medicine that we, as a family, needed to get us back on track, to start communicating effectively. And, in the end, this short film is so much more than anything I imagined it could be. As a family, we worked on a project together, which we have become very proud of. It’s a testament to the transformative power of storytelling and the good medicine that teamwork offers, especially when you are feeling isolated, detached and lost.

Bio

JENNIFER PODEMSKI (CANADA) is a director, writer, producer and actor. Born and raised in Toronto, Jennifer makes her home in Barrie, Ontario.

Of mixed Anishinaabe (First Nation) and Ashkenazi (Jewish) decent, Jennifer’s professional acting career began when she was 17. Her breakout role was Sadie, in Bruce McDonald’s iconic film, Dance Me Outside, a performance that garnered critical acclaim, solidifying her place in Canada’s film and television canon. In 1999 Jennifer shifted her focus to producing as a way to address the lack of Indigenous representation in the film and television industry. She launched Big Soul Productions with Laura Milliken becoming Canada’s first Indigenous owned and operated, full-service film and television production and post-production company. Big Soul Productions produced a variety of documentary television series, scripted short films and the award winning, multi-season, all Indigenous dramatic television series Moccasin Flats for Showcase Television and APTN.

In 2005, Jennifer branched out independently and has been creating, producing, writing and directing content through her production company Redcloud Studios Inc. Her most recent credits include 5 seasons of the paranormal television series The Other Side (APTN), the award-winning feature film Empire of Dirt and two seasons of documentary series Future History (APTN) for which she received the 2020 Canadian Screen Award for Best Director Factual.

SOAR

SLATER JEWELL-KEMKER

Soar was a way for me to exorcise past demons, chiefly the estranged relationship I have with my own father, and how that was affecting me in lockdown, the weird guilt and sense of obligation alongside the hurt I carry with me. I found myself wondering what I’d do if I had to take care of him with all that emotional baggage, as so many people have been forced to do during the lockdown. Familial relationships are strained, partnerships either strengthened or destroyed, we’re learning a lot about ourselves and the people we live with when it’s 24/7 in close quarters. Soar also explores how life outside of the lockdown, outside of COVID-19, continues on. We ourselves felt stuck, or feel stuck, but the seasons continue to transform, the animals live their lives, plants grow and trees flourish. Exploring Jess’s transformation from a victim of emotional abuse to that of a strong, self-loving being was important to me as a reflection of the natural world’s brief healing experienced when we weren’t flying planes or burning fossil fuels.

I’d been in lockdown for three weeks when Ingrid reached out to me about being part of this project. I was in a bizarre state of not knowing, as we all were; not knowing what was going to happen next, not knowing how bad or how long this pandemic would last. I felt like I was free floating through my days, through time. I’d had 5 months of global festivals and screenings for my documentary feature canceled and I was left obsessively reading world news and statistics, unable to look away and freaking out. The opportunity to create in this emotional and weird time was a welcome relief and gift to step back and play.

I live on a farm, and I’m grateful that in the lockdown/pandemic I have access to nature, to trees and fields and rivers. I wanted to share that space with whomever would be watching my piece, locked away in their apartments or in the city. I was locked down with a group of friends quarantining on the farm with me, and we happen to be filmmakers and artists and actors. This short film was a way for us to come together and make something for fun, to transform our fear of the unknown into something meaningful.

Bio

SLATER JEWELL-KEMKER (CANADA) has been making films since she was six. An award-winning filmmaker and climate activist, Slater has been featured by Forbes twice: once for her 12-year documentary feature on the rise of the global youth climate movement YOUTH UNSTOPPABLE, and another for her CFC short film Still which explores domestic violence and infatuation. Still premiered at the 2014 Toronto International Film Festival and was chosen as part of Canada’s Top Ten, landing her in Hollywood Reporter’s Next Gen Canadian Filmmakers as one of 15 filmmakers under 30 to watch. Youth Unstoppable premiered at Michael Moore’s invite-only Traverse City Film Festival, going on to screen at over 80 film festivals around the world and garnering thirteen awards. Slater is also an accomplished speaker and frequently is invited to speak on film and climate change panels to represent the voice of youth, in addition to giving filmmaking workshops to teenagers. She is currently in development on her debut fictional feature. She lives in a tiny house on wheels on her farm in Southern Ontario, Canada.
UNCERTAINTY
CARMEN SANGION

I had initially intended on making a film about myself and family in isolation, however, my family chose not to participate. I started filming myself for a few days, but my spirit kept telling me that this was not the film to make. I meditated and asked for direction and within a few days I received divine guidance that I needed to write this story. The characters immediately appeared in my mind’s eye and I started the process of creating. I knew that I wanted to make a film about a couple struggling to cope with the difficulties of mental issues. I instinctively knew that the characters would not speak but I could still hear their voices talking to me. That’s when the idea of the poem came to mind. I wanted the poem to express the characters’ innermost thoughts and feelings. I contacted a dear friend, Delia Meyer, an extremely talented poet, actress and acting teacher. I told her what I wanted to achieve and she went away and started feeding me with some initial words and ideas. I needed a house and two actors and that was the next step. It was relatively easy. Stephanie Sandows is the lead actress in my still to be produced second feature film Push. Fortunately for me Stephanie is married to an equally talented actor Hungani Ndlovu and they have an incredibly beautiful home that they share. So my actors and my location were sorted.

At first, I figured Stephanie and Hungani would shoot themselves with their cellphones with me directing via Zoom. So I created a reference video with a collage of images and some music that I felt encapsulated the mood. I sent this video to Delia for her to use as a basis for the poem. I saw the narrative in three stages: PEACE, CHAOS and UNCERTAINTY. When I first started conceptualizing the film I had envisioned dance to be a part of the emotional language. I didn’t have a clue how that was going to work, but luckily the creative gods were kind to me because it turned out that Hungani is quite a gifted dancer and choreographer. So while Delia and I wrote, Hungani worked on the choreography with Stephanie.

We were about a week away from what was supposed to be the end of our lockdown when I was told that I could get a permit for a film shoot. And because of this I thought well why shoot it myself when I can get someone who is gifted at capturing images to do it for me. I was then able to secure a permit for both myself and my cinematographer, Chuanne Blofield. We went to Stephanie and Hungani’s home and shot the film over a weekend, wearing masks and using sanitizer at every turn. Once we had shot the film, I did a paper edit and secured my editor friends Lunghelo Mhlati and Alino Katombe to do the edit. We went back and forth on the cut via Zoom. Simultaneously Ingrid introduced me to Simon Poole who is a Canadian composer and recent graduate of the CFC (Canadian Film Centre). Meanwhile, Stephanie and Hungani were coached by Delia on how to deliver the poem, which they recorded on their cellphones. Then everything just beautifully melded together to create the final piece. It has been such an incredibly rewarding experience, one for which I will always be immensely grateful for.

Bio

CARMEN SANGION (SOUTH AFRICA) has been working consistently as a writer/director for over 20 years in Johannesburg, South Africa. She has written on numerous television shows written and directed a number of short films namely an award winning 10-minute film called My Name is Jacob. This was followed by a 26-minute short film, which she wrote, directed and produced. The film is called 'The Lovers', it continues to be screened on rotation on South Africa television and was selected for screening at the Durban International Film Festival, The Rialto Film Festival in Amsterdam and The Brazil Short Film Festival. In 2011 she completed another short film entitled Southern Cross followed by three 52-minute made for television films which she directed in 2013. Carmen was selected to participate in the IFP’s No Borders International Co-Production Market in New York, for her multi-narrative project Salvation, which she attended in September 2014 and was also selected to be part of the 2016 International Film Festival Rotterdam Lab for emerging producers. Salvation is Carmen’s feature film writing and directorial debut, which she co-produced with her sister Kim Sangion under their company SangSang Entertainment. In September 2018, Salvation was selected to be part of the Works in Progress program at the Cape Town International Film Festival. Salvation had its world premiere at the Silicon Valley African Film Festival 2019, where it was in competition. The film was also officially selected to screen at the LA Femme Film Festival, Rapid Lion International Film Festival, African Rising Film Festival and Johannesburg International Film Festival. Carmen is currently preparing to go into production on her second feature film entitled Push, and is writing her third feature, which she hopes to produce in 2021.

ENCOUNTER
LYDIA ZIMMERMANN

It’s night outside and I am lying in bed, relieved I made it back on the last plane home before the lockdown. During the past three days, borders have been literally closing behind me.
So here I am, safe and sound, all cozy, when my phone blinks. ‘I have sent you a message. It’s Ingrid’, whom I have not seen in… 15 years? Nowadays this means nothing, I know. We have ‘seen’ each other posting news and projects on social webs. I know she is a filmmaker to the bone, that she loves the thrill of capturing time, filmic journeys and experiments… Just like me.

A few days later, I am zooming with her and eight other filmmakers from around the world, talking about this film that we are set to collectively deliver. A ‘cadaver exquis’ but without the surrealism. We are all so different and multiple, I quickly realise this is a nine-headed beast that Ingrid, during the next two months, and with her passion at work, will manage to bring into frame.

On my side, I spend most of this time wondering which story belongs to this place where I have just landed: the valley. The premise is clear and I have here all my working tools. I write a fictional story about a man getting infected by the virus and how the neighbours organize to help, or not… but no one wants to play for the camera. ‘We are not actors!’, all my neighbours say. Corona-virus has settled in, already forcing upon all of us a new relational behaviour. Almost everyone mistrusts, I don’t want to insist…

I spend a lot of time just looking by the window. The light. The sound. The planets, all traveling through time, while I keep still. Far beyond the singing birds I hear the silent sky. A gigantic vault under which every living creature resonates. I think of all the animals, plants and trees that are also my neighbours. They have roots and nests, but they may be also wondering what is happening to us, people in houses.

It’s time to encounter each other.

Bio

LYDIA ZIMMERMANN (SPAIN) has written and directed films since 1994. She is the co-director of experimental film Aro Tolbukhin, in the mind of the killer (2001), a co-production between Spain and Mexico in which she explored the combination of narrative and documentary languages (Best Script & Best Film in the Ariel Prizes 2002). Between 2003 and 2006 she directed for the Catalan TV and RAI two TV movies: Woman of Ice and Second Skin. As a documentarist and producer: Moving of the Circle (2009), Felix & Nati (2011), co-directed with Isaac Pierre Racine, and Maria Talks (2017) in co-production between Artisan Films GmbH and Testamento Productions. From 2011 to 2013 she lived and worked in Haiti, helping start Cine Institute, the first film school of the country. During this period, she combined her pedagogical activity with the production of a filmic essay, ‘Stand-In’, an experimental de-construction of the cinematic language. She holds a Master in Transdisciplinary Arts from the ZHdK (Zurich University of the Arts) where she did a research on non-linear narratives. The result of her investigation is the filmic installation ‘Therese in Bits’ (2015-2019) shown at the Helmhaus Museum in Zurich. She currently lives between Barcelona and Zurich, developing film projects with Artisan Films (Switzerland), Principal Films (Spain) and Ralda World (Catalunya). Lydia Lake is her acting alter ego. Luckily, the lockdown found her at her country house, an hour away from Barcelona, with her two sons, their girlfriends, a herd of birds, and other animals.
